Subject: How does a Sweedish ham get a temporary US ham license?
To: info-hams@ucsd.edu

Hello,

I have a question I hope someone can answer. An associate of mine just arrived here in Rochester today from Sweden and he will be staying here two months. Since he is a ham, he was wondering what he needs to do in order to get a temporary license to operate here. I know it is short notice and there may not be enough time but at least he will know what to do next time.

Thanks for your help and 73.

My heartfelt thanks and appreciation go to Mark Wilson and Kirk Kleinschmidt of QST Magazine.

They accepted my "How to Become a DXer" article last year, then ran the gauntlet to get it printed. I know it was difficult.

These are class guys. First rate.

See, there are some very progressive people in the league!

Thanks again (in public),

| (six weeks ago). after i pass my general, do i go back to waiting
| for another 8 weeks or do i get my new ticket in 2 weeks (aprox.)?

No. Assuming you take tests through the ARRL VEC(*), what happens is that your general test and 610 get held up at the VEC until you receive your tech+ license. This avoids complicating the life of the FCC folks and slowing things down even more. When you get it, you send a copy of your license to the VEC and they will then forward your 610 for the general to the FCC and you wait another 10-12 weeks. However, you DO get to use your general privileges as soon as your first license arrives. On the 610 form you ALWAYS answer NO to the question of whether you have any other applications pending at the FCC. This will be correct because the VEC won't forward it while you do.

This is all explained in a letter you should be given before you leave the VE session.

| i guess what i really want to know is, what happens to my 610 at
| fcc, when another 610 arrives with new information.

See above. The VEC won't let that happen.

(*) I'm not sure what other VECs do.

I have been listening to Tom Sawyer, which I acquired from Project Gutenberg or OBI, I forget which. I am becoming really good with words like "fence", and "white wash", but I don't think they come up in QSOs very frequently.

Even if you KNEW what the call was, until it is mailed to you, received by you, and signed by you, it is not a valid license. You could not use the call, even with a control op present. You would still have to use his callsign.

On a different slant... Isn't there something in the mill about electronic filing?? Perhaps notification could be electronic also...someday.

Cheers (and beers),
